An Integral Cog: Living with Purpose

Dovid Kopel

When I first got introduced to frum Yiddishkeit, it was some Yidden with cholent and Dougie's poppers. They asked deep questions. They were logical, thought-provoking. They had purpose in their step. It wasn't a hobby; it wasn't a religion. It was life.

When I went to yeshiva, I was immersed in a sea of learning; I didn't have the ability to step back and really see what I was doing. I was too involved in the single סוגיא to think bigger.

I am an integral cog in the history of the Jewish people — we all are. I'm keeping a beautiful tradition alive, following תורה ומצות and doing it with a smile. I'm raising beautiful children who are devoting themselves to a higher purpose. They get up in the morning saying מודה אני and don't immediately go on TikTok. They are living with purpose, doing their עבודת השם.

Now I want to help them find their place in this world — to carve out their unique purpose in their time on this planet. Wake up with purpose. Go to sleep fulfilled. Rinse and repeat. I try to teach my children that we make mistakes and have regrets; the worst regret is time wasted. You cannot get it back.

Enjoy every moment of your time in this world. Don't waste a second of it. It's all a present, and a chance for growth and closeness. That doesn't mean you can't have fun or time to relax. It means: don't waste it. Don't have regrets. Shteig ose, and do it with a smile!
